You do not have to be "artistic" or have any prior experience to enjoy oil painting as a hobby. Daniel promises that anyone who wants to learn how to paint -- can. He says, "I have never found anybody I could not teach to draw or paint." You can do this – and we can help!

Even celebrities paint – ranging from Prince Charles and Paul McCartney, Pierce Brosnan and Sylvester Stallone, to George W. Bush, Jane Seymour, Tony Bennett, and Billy Dee Williams!

Art is a popular hobby: more than 21 million Americans draw. One reason is that our students find great individual satisfaction in their artwork. It also lets them tap into their creative side, which may have been dormant for a long time.

In addition, mastering the skill of oil painting can build your self-confidence. "Knowing how to start a painting and turn it into quality artwork makes students feel good about themselves," says Daniel. Art also gives you instant gratification – you immediately see the results of your work as you paint.

Perhaps the biggest reason to learn oil painting is that it is an extremely relaxing hobby. Drawing and painting are a meditative process in which you become fully engaged in the work --and forget about outside worries or concerns.
